Damage By Wind, Rain Is Reported In Many Places

Striking without warning and driving before lightning and torrential rain, a sixty-mile gale howled out of the southwest Thursday evening to run amuck through Parisarea, uprooting trees, disrupting electric service, tangling telephone lines, unroofing houses, smashing plate glass windows, setting a gin on fire at Cooper, showering Roston with oats from nearby fields and blowing down oil derricks at Klondike and Cooper.

COOPER—Accompanying a cyclonic storm which struck here about 7:15 o'clock Thursday night, lightning set Yoakum's gin afire, smashed the front plate glass windows and brick facings of the mayor's office, pushed in the glass at the post office, uprooted trees and damaged telephone and electric lines all over town.

ROXTON—A shower of oats from a nearby field and a driving rain accompanied a gale which struck Roston about 7:20 o'clock Thursday evening. Telephone lines in Roston were tangled by the gale. Several roofs were torn off of small sheds and chicken houses. The damage was not estimated. No people were injured.

LAKE CREEK—Roofs were lifted from small houses and sheds by a gale which struck Lake Creek about 7:20 o'clock Thursday. Telephone connections were out of order for over an hour. Trees, uprooted by the storm, were blown about town. Crop damage was undetermined.

DEPORT—Unroofing chicken houses and tearing up trees, putting out the electric lights for a few minutes and blowing dirt and dust over town, a storm raged here a little after 7 o'clock Thursday. The oil derrick at the Doyle-Jordan well and the Bundy well at Halesboro were not affected.

BLOSSOM—Only a light shower and a fairly stiff wind reached Blossom as part of the gale which hit in other sections of Parisarea Thursday.

ARTHUR CITY—No damage was done at Arthur City and this vicinity by storm Thursday evening. A stiff wind and a little rain were the only effects.

CLARKSVILLE—From 7:30 until 8 o'clock a storm ran through Clarksville from the southwest. Glass was broken in the upstairs windows in the old First National bank building on the square.

At the city hall, the gates of the fire station were torn off and deposited across the street. The glass in the front door was broken, window panes upstairs were pushed in. A galvanized iron roofed shed at the Temple Lumber company was unroofed and the metal rolled up. Signs around the square were torn down.

Wall paper in four rooms of Saul Rosenfield's home was stripped from the walls. Porch furniture was flying with the storm to all parts of town. Telephone connections were unharmed but electric lights were out for a few minutes. Large trees were uprooted.

English, about 10 miles northeast of Clarksville, reported that trees were blown down on Highway 5 and that several trucks had barely missed accidents.

JURY SYSTEM IS UPHELD IN COURT

Bill Making Trial by Jury Unnecessary Under Guilty Plea Condemned

The Lions Club Thursday noon heard John Hutchison, county attorney vigorously condemn the action of the legislature in making it legal for trial by jury to be eliminated in cases of the "guilty" plea. The jury system, he said, is the keystone of protection that society gives to the individual. He pleaded for whole-hearted support of all citizens in the selection of juries saying that jury slackers are destructive to the best interests of society.

Mr. Hutchison described the jury system in Lamar county, pointing out that it is unlike the "jury wheel" system used in most Texas

There's an element of the eternal triangle in "Air Police," the dramatic Thrill-O-Drama of the skyways at the Lamar theatre, starting today but so unusual is this new treatment of the theme that picture fans everywhere are flocking to it with enthusiasm. In this instance, the triangle is without a villain, although both men in the story love the same girl. Each is a pilot on the border patrol and is unaware of the other's love for the girl. Naturally, one loses, but through an act of sheer heroism and sacrifice for the service in which he has enlisted his services.

BAND TO PLAY AT BYWATERS PARK

The Paris municipal band will give its weekly concert Friday evening at 8 o'clock at Bywaters park, under direction of Arthur Layton.

A varied and interesting program has been arranged for the occasion, including both popular and concert numbers.

The band gives a weekly concert throughout the summer season at one or the other of the city recreational grounds.

Also on the program were Miss Marian Briggs, who played several well-received piano selections, and Miss Addie Beauchamp, whose whistling was remarkably like the songs of the various birds it purported to represent. Ross Hiff was program chairman of the day.

Elected to membership was Eugene McClure, Sinclair Oil Company agent here, a member of the Lions Club in Breckenridge before coming to Paris. It was announced that the club had elected County Judge C. A. Martin to membership a week ago.

Attending the meeting as visitors were Eugene McClure and Clarence Blankenship of Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

Bailing was continued at the oil test on the Guest farm near Depot Thursday. This work is expected to be completed some time Friday afternoon, it was reported. It is the opinion of J. H. Doyle, in charge of operations, that the packer will hold when bailing is finally finished, and if it does the work of setting and cementing casing will be started.

A rumor became current Thursday about noon that the test at Halesboro had blown in and that oil was coming out of the top of the derrick. A big crowd that was present at the Depot test went to that place. It was reported that the well was making gas heads, but very little, if any oil was in evidence.

The number of oil seeps watching the Depot well is increasing. Paris citizens who were there Thursday afternoon reported.

Excavation for the foundation of the J. J. Culbertson public library building began Monday morning, is expected to be completed this week, according to J. L. Weas, supervising architect. The contract for excavation was awarded Ben Smith, and local labor is being used.

Pouring concrete will be started next week, Mr. Weas says, and on completion of this work will be suspended a week or ten days in order to allow the concrete to settle before the stone and brick work is started.

Smoke a fresh cigarette

Of course I've switched to CAMELS

You don't have to look beyond your own intimate circle to realize what has happened.

Everywhere you see evidence of a great country-wide switch to Camels.

That is because the new Humidor Pack performs a real new service for the smoker.

Throughout the nation, literally millions of people have found by actual test that the new air-sealed, sanitary package of moisture-proof Cellophane not only keeps out dust and germs, but also keeps in the rich, mild flavor of the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camels are blended.

To show their real appreciation of the Humidor Pack Camel smokers from all parts of the country write letters telling the advantages of this scientific new wrapping.

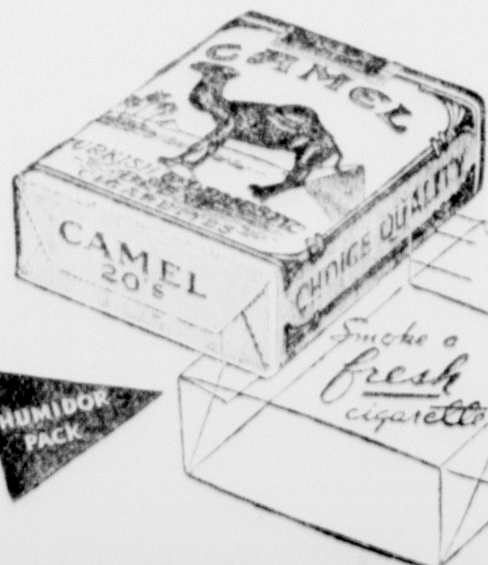

Women tell us they carry Camels in the Humidor

Pack in their handbags without having them absorb powder and perfume odors. Workingmen say this moisture-proof wrapping protects their cigarettes from perspiration and pocket dust. Sailors are enthusiastic because the damp salt air does not reach Humidor-packed Camels.

All real benefits of course, but the chief fact that is causing this great nation-wide swing to Camels is the protection which this air-sealed wrapping gives to the choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos of which Camel cigarettes are blended.

No peppery dust to irritate the membrane; no dried-out tobacco to burn the tongue or sear the throat. Just the fresh, cool mildness of perfectly conditioned tobacco.

Switch to Camels for one day, then quit them—if you can.

Don't remove the moisture-proof Cellophane from your package of Camels after you open it. The Humidor Pack is protection against perfume and powder odors, dust and germs. It delivers fresh Camels and keeps them right until you smoke the last one.

New York Stock Market
NEW YORK, June 11. (P)—The financial markets were quiet Thursday. Stocks drifted away most of the session without reaching much of a decision, but a late rally in the rails enlivened proceedings and gave a strong tone to the close.
The chief event in bonds was a sharp break in the Germans. Domestic rail bonds found a generally improved market. Wheat was affected by weather news, but losses were small.
Shares moved up along a wide front at the opening, but with the exception of the carrier issues which were stimulated by the executives' meeting, those prices were for the most part the day's highest. The volume was small, only 1,700,000 shares changing hands.

The rails, however, rallied sturdily when reports from the conference indicated that an agreement was being reached on the freight increase petition. Atchafalaya and Union Pacific gained 5, Southern Pacific, Rock Island and Baltimore and Ohio about 4, and Pennsilvania, New York Central, Chesapeake and Ohio, Missouri Pacific and New Haven 2 to 3, Southern Railway, which had tumbled 3 points on the dividend statement by the directors, recovered its loss.

The agreement among the railroad presidents for a 15 per cent rise in freight rates was in line with expectations. Little time is to be lost in getting the petition before the Interstate Commerce commission, indicating that other roads subscribe to the statement. President Gray of the Union Pacific who said freight revenues of western roads in the last five or six months had reached "an irreducible minimum."

Just medicine he took formed up in his stomach, and he had a really strong medicine. About two years ago he had a bad attack of gall bladder, and the doctors wanted to operate, but he would not consent. He also suffered from terrible constipation and he had almost every kind of medicine in his efforts to find relief.

You'll call Pontiac the happy medium . . . quality you won't do without, at a cost you can easily pay

It isn't difficult to learn what most people want in a motor car. We all want pretty much the same fine qualities—and we want them at a moderate price.

You will find this combination in the Pontiac—that fine General Motors car. Thus, if it's a damp day when you first drive a Pontiac you will notice how snug and dry it is inside. The same with heat, cold and traffic noise—because Pontiac's fine Fisher bodies are tightly insulated.

Appreciating the comfortable seats, you will remark also the absence of road shocks. This is due to hydraulic shock absorbers and rubber cushioning at 43 points in the chassis.

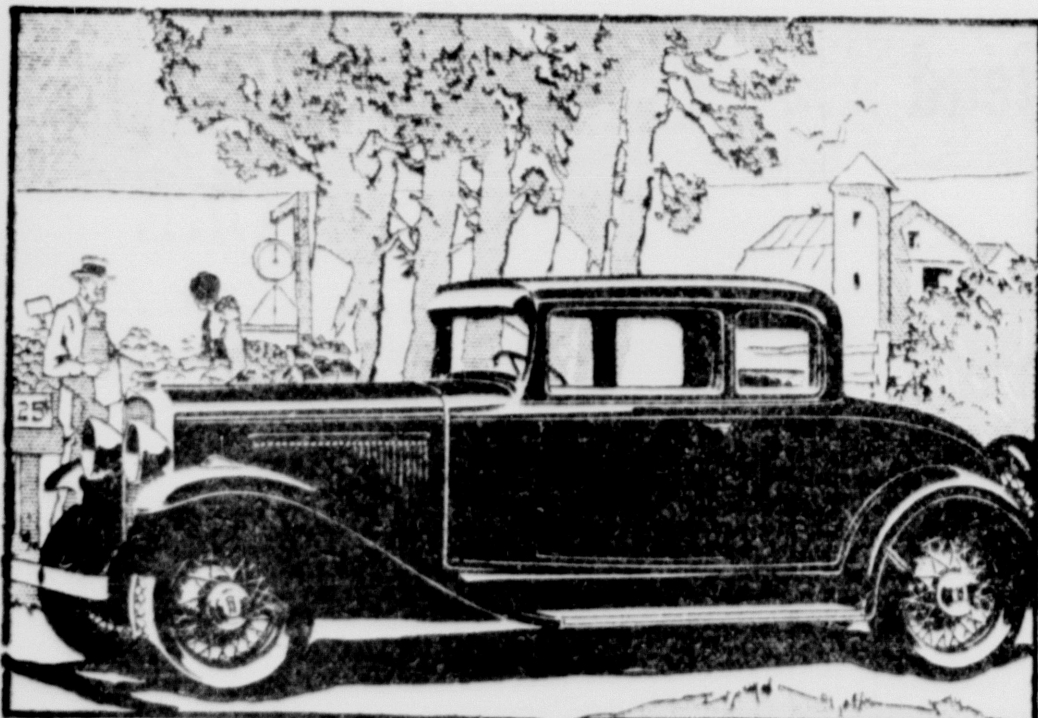

When you first step inside the Pontiac you will see something unusual—genuine mohair or whipcord upholstery in the closed cars; fine leathers in open models.

Even though you feel that most cars have satisfactory engines, you will be surprised at the smoothness with which Pontiac's engine does its work. As you drive you will admire the quick pick-up and power of that big, easy-working motor.

Good looks? Smartness? We can leave the proof to remarks you will hear and the approving glances you will see! (Bodies by Fisher.)

Possibly we are prejudiced—yet owners praise this car more than we would dare to. The values they have discovered will be clear to you once you have driven the Pontiac. Why not do that! Any Oakland-Pontiac dealer will arrange a demonstration.

Self-Blacking

THE BAT BAG By Harry Cox

Among other inquiries sent to this desk is one asking the whereabouts of Red Reynolds, who in days gone by pastime on the Paris ball club. The last account of Red was to the effect he was a member of the "white wings" force in Seminole, Okla. Not meaning that Red had sprouted white wings, but that he was the motive power behind one of those contraptions that cities use to keep the streets clean. He was slated to visit Paris two years ago with a semi-pro ball club, but was missed somewhere en route to this city.

This Reynolds was a character. He came to Paris from Ardmore when the Oklahoma town and Paris were fighting for the pennant. Red was one of the big factors in turning back the opposition. He is a slick work driver in some badly needed runs, whereas the red-tailed Reynolds waxed gleeful. "Them birds let me go because of my habits," Reynolds told Paris friends. "Can't beat that?" Red whined. "There's that Eli Boggs, Sled Allen, Nick Carter and about eight or ten other chaps. Single-handed drinkers on that club and they let me go. I got 'em at 'em." And Reynolds did go at 'em.

Red smacked the ball thither and yon during the hectic series and fiddled like an expert. And every time he rattled the boards with a long drive Red would yell "Goon and take it, ye yellow bums," but he did not always say "bums." It was something else that had to do with ancestry. Tommy Lovelace was one player in particular that Reynolds took a great pleasure in "riding." Tommy was inclined to be a bit chesty when he hit Paris, but his chestiness was all gone, along with the pennant when Tommy & Co. left town.

It was during that memorable series that the Paris fans got after Nick Carter, Ardmore chunker, Nick was accused of trying to cheat, and the fans thought he was making too free use of a bottle to cut the ball. The umpires were a little indulgent with Nick and the fans finally took the matter into their own hands. When this little thing happened Nick quit cheating if he had ever attempted it. "That game woulda hung me," Nick said that night down town. "And," he added, "I'm too young to die."

It is noted on the sport pages of some of the state papers that Max Schmelling, German, who won the world heavy weight championship when struck a foul blow by Jack Sharkey, met Young Willie Steele, who he is to fight on July 5 for the title, shook hands the other day. A picture of the two noble athletes showed where they were holding hands, and from their expressions were evidently discussing what is latest in back-slamming, ping pong, croquet, or some other sport. But the "cut lines" underneath the picture did not say whether or not they knew of each other. They may have.

Just imagine Jack Dempsey, old Bob Fitzsimmons, Jim Corbett or some of the other old time scrappers pulling a stunt like that. If memory serves us right when Fitz and Corbett met to sign articles of agreement for a fight Corbett threw a glass of liquor in the Fitzsimmons' face and followed it up by citing "spittle" into the freckled man of Roby Robert. And it took all the combined newspaper men and spectators to keep the championship battle from being fought right then and there. The boys of those days were batters—not too dancers—and up until the last few years has championship contests been decided by decisions on "points."

And while discussing a moment from baseball it might be stated that "wrestling" is fast taking the place away from the boxers. Spectators at least get a run for their money when a couple of the "grunt groan and moan" boys get together in the ring or on the mat. Wrestling was once regarded as a game of science, but that has long since been discarded. Now the tin-eared prize do everything but kill each other. Down at San Antonio not many weeks ago, Billie Edwards, in a match with Hugh Nichols, hit Hughie with a ring post after failing to knock him out by boxing, hitting and slugging.

We are headed for the open Open spaces where fresh air and sunshine put roses in our cheeks. Open democracy that substitutes frankness for secret scheming and negotiation. Open opportunities, open doors in business . . . And modern business in general conducted in an honest and open manner.

No force has been as powerful as advertising, in bringing American business into the open. A manufacturer who advertises, issues an open challenge to every competitor to produce better goods if he can. He invites the public to compare his article with all others. He makes definite claims for his product over his own signature. And he knows the vital importance of keeping his promises.

Advertising tells you where you can get the greatest value for your money. When you buy an advertised article, you know it is dependable. An unknown product means nothing. Advertising prohibits the worthless, and promotes the good.

The advertisements in this newspaper are the daily record of business progress, the report to you of the manufacturers and merchants who serve you. It will pay you to read them.

LOVE, PREFERRED
THE ROMANCE OF A BUSINESS GIRL

CHAPTER 23
"That is exactly what you should do," Willa agreed, when Mary confided that she would like to stay in New York for a while, to get away from memories and the necessity of seeing Dick often. "Have you any place in mind?"

"No, I thought you might have some suggestion. I'd like to get a room with kitchenette and bath, but I suppose that would be a first."

"Well, this kind of place you would like, wouldn't you? But I have suggestion. Why don't you come here and stay for a few weeks, anyway? We almost never use the extra room. Your house would fit in with our schedule fine. We would only be together at dinner. Chloe will give you breakfast. We'd love to have you, really."

Mary was incredulous. "Oh, I couldn't impose upon your generosity like that! Of course, it would be lovely, Willa, but—"

"There is no imposition about it. Unless you would prefer to be entirely alone—though you practically would be except for dinner. And cooking and eating alone isn't so pleasant, after all. Please say you will try staying with us for a while. You could be looking for a place, later, if you decide to stay in the city."

"I can't refuse such an offer as that," Mary consented.

When Ramon arrived, he put his seal and approval on the arrangement, without hesitation. So Mary moved into the quiet little guest room in the Duchon apartment. She had explained the situation to her mother, regretting that anything had to take her away. She wasn't at home much, but it was a comfort to Dennis Vaughn to know that Mary came home every night, sometimes, and to have her cheerful presence at the dinner table part of the time. Her face was stricken at her daughter's news.

"I know it's mighty hard for you, child," Mom agreed. She seemed to have grown older suddenly, as mothers do when their young begin to leave the old nest. For trial flights into the world. As long as they just talk about starting out, mother doesn't give it much credence, but when they actually leave, that is different. "It has been too far for you to live away from your work all these two years. And since things have been like they are—" she referred to Bonnie's and Dick's engagement in the delicate manner with which one refers to grievous tragedies. "I can't blame you for wanting to get away for a while. In fact I think you should do that very thing. You are sure those people are all right—the ones who want you to stay with them?"

"They are splendid, Mom. Some day I'll have you come into New York and meet me for lunch, then I will take you down to see Willa. I know you would love her. In a way, she seems a lot older than I, but she isn't."

"Well, I reckon if you like her, that's enough of a recommendation. I never knew you to like the wrong people yet."

Mary sighed. "Strange, that I should be coming to stay with Dick's friends, especially to get away from seeing him. That is the way all of life seems to be, so often—"

"all contradictory and inconsistent and mixed up."

"Doesn't Dick go there much?"

"Not since he has been with Bonnie. I guess he doesn't like the crowd so much. Bonnie and I never did care about the same people except one," she corrected herself sharply. "That's another instance of life's queer pranks."

"Pshaw, yes, I declare. I can't understand it, anyway. Bonnie always has been a puzzle, and I guess she always will be. Eighy—she is more like her father. I never did know what to expect him to do next. That's why he met his fate to young—daring to do the crazy things that most people wouldn't think of. I really will be glad when Bonnie gets married, because a steady, solid man like Dick ought to help her."

Mary hoped silently, and with all her heart, that their marriage wouldn't prove to be his unbalancing, instead. Bonnie was her little sister, she couldn't criticize her too harshly, but knowing Dick's aspirations and Bonnie's disposition both, so well, she couldn't associate the two with success.

Mary found that the short distance morning and night, to and from the office, was an amazing relief from the tedious train-ferry-subway journey. She discovered that this alone, increased her efficiency and energy about one hundred per cent. The change of scene and surroundings also were beneficial, and the relief from chance encounters with Dick was profound.

On the evenings when she was not working at the office or attending an occasional movie, she retired to her room early to afford the Duchons their valuable privacy. The long hours of refreshing sleep gradually restored her natural poise and calm. It was not accomplished all at once, nor without its price.

There were days, and nights, when the old pain and longing for love—that could never be more than a memory, now—drove her with incessant and merciless torture. Whenever she went anywhere that winter, orchestra and radio haunted her with melodies such as, "If I Could Be With You One Hour Tonight," "Heartache" and "My Love For You."

Everything seemed to conspire against her in her struggle to forget. Attention from other men were particularly irksome to her. Always, she compared their actions, words, appearance—everything about them, with Dick's. He was her standard, in spite of the fact that he had lifted her. Had any other man treated her so, she would have counted it very much against him, to doubt. But not Dick. She loved him.

Foster was delighted when Mary informed him of her change in plans. He noted also, as the days passed, that the change was doing her a vast amount of good. He felt that the situation was improving in his favor.

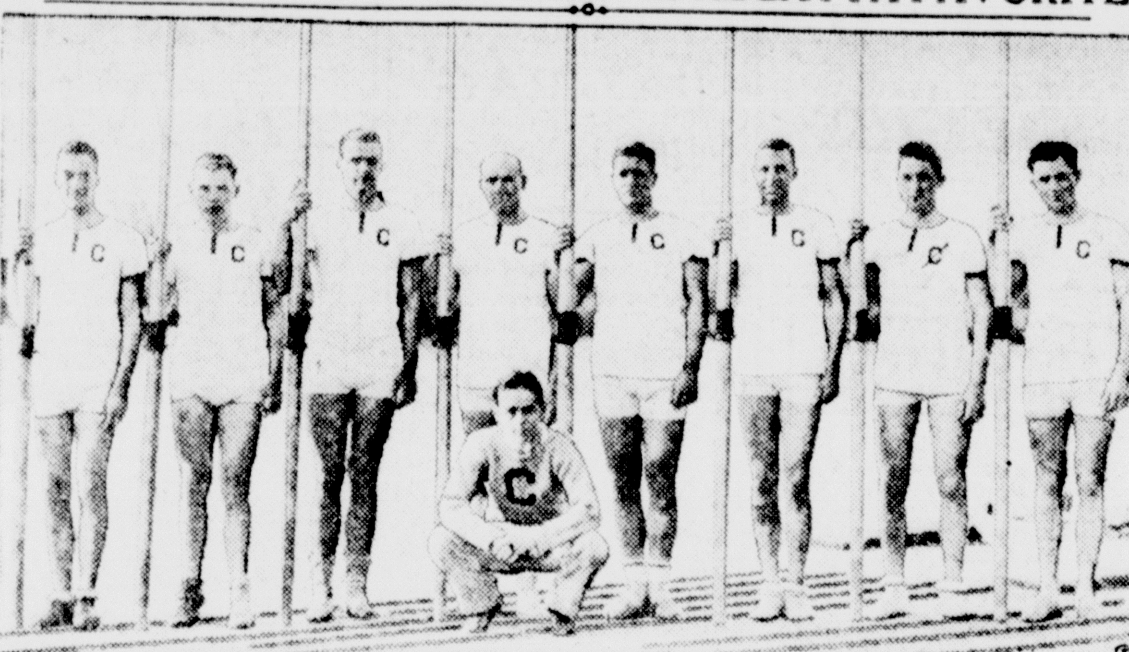

"You won't be staying with your friends indefinitely," he observed. "Any time you decide to take an apartment of your own, let me know. I might persuade one of several real estate brokers I know to give you a special rate. Tador City is a pleasant place for business girls to live."

"It is pleasant enough for those who can afford it. Not everyone can manage to live in Tador City, even with a good salary."

"I think you could manage it very well. We shall see," he promised carelessly.

She didn't tell him that she had to pay a certain amount to her mother out of her salary every week, whether or not she lived at home. Mary was not a person who confided her affairs and troubles to others. She knew that no one else cared particularly about her, even if she was interested in his or her own. Least of all would she confide her financial troubles to her employer. Under the present circumstances, it would practically
